Out of My Mind is narrated by 11-year-old Melody, who has cerebral palsy. Because of her inability to speak, her classmates underestimate her intelligence. When she begins using a device that allows her to communicate, she is finally able to express herself in ways that give her satisfaction and empowerment.

Nonfiction Book Pick

DANA PERINO

#1 New York Times bestselling author of And the Good News Is...

Everything Will Be Okay by Dana Perino

There is much practical advice in this empowering book that helps young women (and older ones!) navigate their career paths. Perino gives off the same relaxed, conversational vibe that her TV presence does, while also providing in depth guidance that can be applied to every area of life. From interviews and time management, to relationships and faith. . . she points out what's important. She advocates for women, stressing that the way to get ahead in life is to have agency and take control of your situation.

Fiction Book Pick

The House in the Cerulean Sea by TJ Klune

Linus is a single man who lives with his cat and works a dull job at the Department in Charge of Magical Youth, an agency that oversees orphanages for children with magical abilities. When he is given an assignment to investigate a hidden house on Marsyas Island, he leaves his home expecting a routine visit. It turns out to be an eye-opening experience that challenges him to reevaluate his life.
